The Administration shall furthermore report monthly on the year-to-date status (through the end of the reported month) and the annual forecast of cash inflows and outflows, including a projection of end-of-year cash balances. Moreover, starting with the second quarter of 2009, the quarterly end-of-month reports for March, June, September and December shall be more detailed and shall include a variance report on the City's larger capital projects. The mid-year report through June 30 shall provide comprehensive details and summaries and shall be accompanied by the Administration's mid-year report. Each such report for the year-to-date through a reporting month shall be presented to the Finance Committee not later than the first Finance Committee meeting occurring in the second month following the reporting month.

3.2 Financial Capacity Analysis

(a) In General. Based on the schedule stated in the annual budget calendar approved by Council, the Administration shall deliver to Council a 10-year Financial Capacity Analysis, depicting (i) detailed revenue and expenditure forecasts for the current year, and also including (ii) the three prior years, and (iii) projections for the ensuing six future years. The Administration shall present to Council one or more updated Financial Capacity Analysis versions not later than the dates stated on the Council's budget calendar. The purposes of the Financial Capacity Analysis shall be (i) to enable Council to utilize this data to analyze and evaluate the long-term fiscal impacts of up to date cash forecasts and current budget choices, decisions and policy options, and (ii) to meet the requirements of Growth Management Act for a Financial Capacity Analysis to accompany the Capital Facilities Plan."

(b) Conservative Forecasts. The City's budget amendment process shall be used to adjust speculative revenue estimates when they become certain and measurable. City tax-supported funds revenue forecasts shall not assume growth rates that exceed general inflation (Seattle Tacoma CPI-U for December of the prior year). Real growth that exceeds inflation will be recognized through the City's budget amendment process.
